

A Practical English Grammar
Exercises 1
Third edition

This is one of two books of exercises designed to accompany Thomson and Martinet's Practical English Grammar. They provide intermediate learners with a wealth of interesting and lively practice material, concentrating on those areas of grammar which generally cause most difficulty. The books may be used alongside the Grammar or on their own, with or without a teacher, and are particularly useful for revision. Answers are printed at the end of each book.

For this third edition some changes have been made in the text to bring it up to date and five new exercises have been added, making a total for both books of 190. The exercises now follow the same sequence as the chapters in the Grammar and they have all been graded. References are to the fourth (1986) edition of the Grammar.

17 have: possessive

▣ PEG 122

In British English, have meaning possess is not normally conjugated with do except when there is an idea of habit.

- I haven't (got) a watch.* (present possession)
 How many corners has a cube? (a characteristic rather than a habit)
 He doesn't usually have time to study. (habit)

In the past, did is used for habit; otherwise either form is possible:

Did you have/Had you an umbrella when you left the house?

In other English-speaking countries, however, the do forms are used almost exclusively. It would therefore be possible to use do/did forms throughout the following exercises (except in no. 27), but students are asked to use have not/have you forms where they could be used. Where both are equally usual this will be noted in the key.

Fill the spaces with the correct forms of have, adding got where possible. Only one space will be left in each clause, but note that got may be separated from have by another word. When a negative form is required ('negative') will be placed at the end of the example.

- 1 He is standing there in the rain and . . . even the sense to put up his umbrella. (negative)
- 2 He . . . a cold in the head. ~

52 The future continuous tense

- PEG 211-13

This tense can be used

1 with a point in time to indicate that the action will begin before this time and continue after it.

2 with or without a time to express a future without intention. In this way it is very like the present continuous, but it is not, like the present continuous, restricted in time and is a more detached and casual way of expressing the future. It often implies that the action will occur in the ordinary course of events or as a matter of routine.

(Except when used as in 1, above, this tense can usually be replaced by one of the other future forms, though the exact shade of meaning may then be lost.)

Put the verbs in brackets into the future continuous tense.

[55] Second person interrogative: will you and other forms will you? often introduces a request or invitation, and sometimes a command. It is often used also to introduce questions about intentions when the situation requires an unpremeditated decision.

- PEG 215 B

You can have either. Which will you have?

You've missed the last train. What will you do now?

For other types of intention, however, it is usually safer to use one of the other future forms: be going to, the present continuous or the future continuous (which is considered the most polite form).

Put the verbs in brackets into one of the four forms. When more than one answer is possible, this will be noted in the key.

56 shall and will

shall is correct for the first person of the future simple (except when this form is used to express intention), but in the affirmative and negative will is very often used instead, i.e. we can say, 'I/we will' and 'I/we won't' instead of 'I/we shall' and 'I/we shan't'. In the interrogative will should not be used to replace shall.

There are some rather old-fashioned or formal constructions where shall is used with the second or third persons. Here shall cannot be replaced by will. Such constructions are usually avoided but a few examples have been given below.

Use will or shall to fill the spaces in the following sentences. Sometimes either could be used.

78 Gerund and infinitive

- PEG 266-71

After like it is sometimes possible to use either gerund or infinitive, but there tends to be a slight difference in implication.

like + gerund usually means 'enjoy'; it also usually implies that the action is/was performed:

I like skating = I enjoy skating (and do skate).

like + infinitive has more the meaning of 'approve of, 'like the idea or habit. In the affirmative it gives no indication as to whether the action is performed or not, and in the negative implies that it is not performed.

I didn't like saying it usually means 'I said it, unwillingly, but I didn't like to say it usually means 'I didn't say it' (because it didn't seem right or sensible). The distinction, however, is not rigid. The above notes are, therefore, only guides which may safely be followed.

Put the verbs in brackets into gerund or infinitive.

81 Misrelated participles

- PEG 280

A participle is considered to belong to the noun or pronoun that immediately precedes it (which usually, but not necessarily, is the subject of the main verb).

The boy, climbing the tree to get birds' eggs, had a bad fall.

If there is no noun/pronoun in this position the participle is considered to belong to the subject of the following main verb:

Climbing the tree to get birds' eggs, the boy had a bad fall.

Sometimes this principle is disregarded and confusion results:

Climbing down the tree, one of the eggs broke.

This word order makes it appear that the egg was climbing, which is nonsense. A participle linked in this way to the wrong noun/pronoun is said to be 'misrelated'. The sentence should be rewritten:

Climbing down the tree he broke one of the eggs or

As he was climbing down the tree one of the eggs broke.

Other examples of this type of error are given below. Correct the sentences. Sometimes only a change of order is required.

9 Indirect speech

85 Indirect speech: statements

PEG 307-8, 313

1 Students are asked to assume that these sentences are spoken and reported on different days. This will mean that a sentence such as: He said, 'I am coming tomorrow,' will become: He said that he was coming the next day, and so on.

This applies to all the exercises on indirect speech in this book.

2 With indirect speech, when the person addressed is mentioned, tell is more usual than say to as an introductory verb. For example:

is more usual than

- 36 'Were your boys happy there?' ~
 'Yes, they were.'
Asked if her boys had been happy there and she said that they had.

95 Indirect speech: commands and questions with if- clauses and time clauses

PEG 229, 320-1

Questions with if- clauses and time clauses should be reported with the if- clause or time clause last.

'When/If I see him, what shall I say?' she asked.

She asked what she should say when/if she saw him.

Commands can be reported by tell + infinitive + if- clause/time clause.

But sometimes (as in nos. 5 and 10 below) this would produce a rather clumsy sentence. It is then advisable to use say/said that + if- clause/time clause + be/should + infinitive.

'If /When you see him, ask him to ring me,' she said.

She said that if/when I saw him I was to ask him to ring her.

was to expresses a definite command; should implies advice.

Put the following into indirect speech.

- 1 He said, 'When you are at the butcher's remember to get a bone for the dog.'
- 2 She said, 'If you feel faint sit down and put your head between your knees.'
- 3 'If I find your purse what shall I do with it?' he said. 'Keep it till you see me again,' I replied.
